Algeria : Parliament Unanimously Passes Bill Introducing Technical Amendments to Constitution

The Parliament, meeting today in a joint plenary session of both Houses at the Palace of Nations (Algiers), unanimously passed the bill introducing technical amendments to the Constitution.

The bill was adopted with 542 votes in favor during a session chaired by Azouz Nasri, Speaker of the Council of the Nation (Parliament’s Upper House), in the presence of the Speaker of the People’s National Assembly (Parliament’s Lower House), Brahim Boughali, and the President of the Constitutional Court, Leila Aslaoui.

The session was also attended by the Chief of Staff of the Presidency of the Republic, Boualem Boualem, as well as members of the Government and representatives of official institutions.

The bill, which includes 12 amendments, aims to “improve certain purely technical aspects of constitutional provisions relating to the organization and functioning of specific constitutional institutions and public bodies.” Prior to the vote, leaders of the parliamentary groups expressed their support for the amendments, stating that the changes will allow for “more precise implementation and the removal of ambiguities, reflecting a political will to build more effective institutions” through the active involvement of political parties.

They further noted that these technical adjustments reflect “the dynamism of the State and its capacity to adapt and refine its legal mechanisms” by addressing shortcomings identified during implementation.

They emphasized that the Constitution remains “the sovereign reference upon which the State relies to establish increasingly efficient and effective institutions.”

Alimentaria International Trade Fair in Barcelona: Several Contracts Signed for the Export of Algerian Products

On Thursday, Algeria concluded its participation in the “Alimentaria 2026” International Food Fair, held from March 23 to 26 in Barcelona, Spain, by signing export contracts and a memorandum of understanding (MoU) regarding the export of Algerian agricultural products, according to a statement from the Ministry of Foreign Trade and Export Promotion.

Algeria participated in this economic event through a national pavilion organized by the ministry, bringing together several companies and economic operators active in the agri-food and agricultural products sectors.

This participation culminated in the signing, by two Algerian companies, of export contracts for local products to the European market, notably olive oil, fruits, and vegetables, as well as an MoU for the export of Algerian olive oil to the Chinese market—a move likely to open new prospects for the national product in Asian markets.

Several professional meetings were held on this occasion at the Algerian pavilion between national operators and their counterparts from various countries, with a view to exploring partnership opportunities and strengthening the presence of Algerian products in international markets.

This participation is part of the Ministry of Foreign Trade and Export Promotion’s efforts to support economic operators and strengthen the presence of Algerian products in foreign markets, with the aim of promoting non-hydrocarbon exports and broadening the base of national exports.
